

WHNP Program FAQ's

- 1. How fast can I complete the MSN Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program? You'll complete 42 credits to earn the MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner (WHNP) degree. You can complete the MSN in WHNP program in as little as five semesters on the full-time curriculum plan and seven semesters on the part-time curriculum plan. Complete the short program interest form ((URL link to short inquiry form)), and an enrollment counselor will contact you with more information about the full-time and part-time options available.

- 2. Does the MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program have a full-time and part-time option?

Yes. The MSN in Women's Health NP program is designed for maximum flexibility and may be taken full-time if you feel you have the time to do so successfully. The MSN in Women's Health NP program is designed for professionals who work full-time and is offered part-time. This allows you to achieve a realistic balance between work, school and personal responsibilities and gives you the opportunity to fully absorb the information in your coursework. Learn more about our program options by visiting our WHNP Curriculum plans (URL link to WHNP Curriculum Plan Pdf).

- 3. Is the MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program accredited?

Yes. Florida A&M University and its degree programs are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC). The MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program is accredited by the Accreditation Commission for Education in Nursing (ACEN)*.

- 4. Is the MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program available in a blended/hybrid format (campus & online)?

The MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner degree is only available either online or on campus. This allows you to study at the location that is best for you throughout your entire program.

- 5. What are the online MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program's admissions requirements?

You can learn more about our admission requirements.

6. Is it possible to transfer credits from another institution to your WHNP program?

Students applying for the online MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner or Non-APN Post-Master's Certificate program may transfer up to 6 credits from an accredited institution after completion of a transcript evaluation. Students applying for the APN post-master's program may transfer up to 22 credits based on their advanced practice specialization.

7. How do I apply to the MSN in Women's Health Nurse Practitioner program?

Begin the next step to becoming an APRN by applying to the MSN Women's Health NP degree program today. The program offers applicants three start dates each year, allowing you to begin your degree at a time that's right for your busy schedule. The first step is to start your application.